

The Richest
Followers
5.4K shares
Share
Like
Retweet
Share
Email
Comment

- [illegible]

1 Comment

10 Idiots Who Got Arrested Because of Facebook

10/12/15 View Photos

Via pinterest.com

1.4k shares Share Retweet

Share Retweet Like

People make websites such as Facebook, are serious business. That is especially true when law enforcement gets involved for one reason or another. For too many people who believe they are protected by a "freedom of speech" act often forget that type of protection comes with certain regulations. Just as you cannot yell out "fire" inside of a crowded theater, that is particularly true without being punished for that action, you cannot break other rules "via Facebook" without the police finding you and coming to your door. It is always wise to remember that you don't want to be the next person to make national headlines all because of one regrettable Facebook post.

Still not sure about the type of Facebook post that may or may not get you arrested? Here is the one question you can ask yourself whenever you have a doubt: "Would you show the Facebook post in question to a police officer without having any fear that you would be arrested and then face charges? If the answer is not "yes" beyond a shadow of a doubt, then you may want to reconsider posting the "Facebook" post. Do not think this being able to talk or delete a Facebook post is a full-proof if you later regret a post. That comment or comment may live on forever if somebody grabs a screenshot of it.

Watch Our Original Trending Videos

- The 10 Worst WTF! Dixie Vandalism Malfunctions
- WTF! Fresh That Were Actually Real
- Climbers That WTF! Gave Up On Too Soon
- Decomposing Wrecking Machines Caught On Camera

View Article in Full View

10. Threat on Police

Via reddit.com

Yann Shourin was a teenager living in Staten Island in December 2013 when he logged onto Facebook. According to this news story, Shourin made a threat that he was going to kill a police officer. That threat, per the story, included "a picture image of a man holding a gun pointed at a police officer." That Facebook post eventually got the teenager arrested. The teen would, in theory, would not act, not be released, and the case would be dismissed. Shourin's mother chose in August of 2013 to take the matter to court, claiming, among other things, that her child's constitutional rights had been violated.

Via stopthecampaign.com

When you are an emergency medical technician working anywhere, let alone in New York City, you should probably not pull your phone out to take a photograph of a colleague. If you become a police officer for whatever reason, you will have to work to make sure that you do not share that photo with Facebook. David and Matthew Post reported that Muscarelli pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct. The sentence included community service, and he was banned from ever again working as an EMT.

8. Ex-Con Doesn't Learn

Via youtube.com

Some people never learn, and some people really never learn. 20-year-old David Wigg was released from jail early in September 2015, and one of the first things that he did was to take a photo of himself with a handgun. These photos got some attention on Facebook, and Wigg was arrested again. He was charged with possession of a firearm. Since Wigg's recent incarceration was the result of a different gun charge, the FBI was neither happy nor impressed. Wigg was picked up by the authorities, and he could be in for a rough ride in 2015.

7. "Attack a Teacher Day"

Via rightstory.com

There is nothing funnier or crazier than the thought of violent acts occurring inside of a school. In 2015, the girls in Nevada received the bad news of the attack on January 20, 2015. These girls used Facebook to invite roughly 100 students to take part in an event named "Attack a Teacher Day." The Nevada Appeal (via http://www.nvappeal.com) reported that the girls were locked down before the attack was over or the police. Whether or not such events are real, law enforcement officials will take them seriously from now on. It is safe to say that these types of events won't be going away.

6. Facebook Murder Plot

via thephillyphilly.com

London Elly was upset with her ex-boyfriend in June 2011. She was, in fact, so upset that she decided to use Facebook to see if anybody wanted to eliminate her former lover. Elly's message to Chad (a local WFLA TV star of Philadelphia, turned a star of the "Miami Heat" game) got the Facebook site to delete her and Elly, signed to get the job done. Chad's team quickly accepted to see the day before any damage was done, but the story was collected and a sad ending. Corey White, later learned to be the one on the other end of the world by his, was killed and killed in August of 2011 while Elly and Elly were both killed here.

5. An Unintentional Threat

via selfinterest.com

Kristen Hildner was in the middle of an online dispute when she used Facebook to upload a picture of herself pointing a pistol. The picture had the following caption: "You know the difference when a girl comes back to me?" Facebook obviously did "come back" for her. It was the police. Hildner, according to the New York Daily News, did not mean the post as a threat against anybody. It was a "threat." Hildner explained to the "NY Daily" that she thought it was a funny picture, and that it looked like it was a threat, but it wasn't. "Taking the picture down was not the same as never posting it."

4. DUI LOL

You know the screen. You have probably used it to text messages and on social media websites such as Facebook. "LOL," was no laughing matter for a woman in 2012. Paula, a 19-year-old DUI driver, posted the following on Facebook after she allegedly drove drunk and hit another vehicle: "My drunk - got a DUI and hit a car LOL." The police, as explained by "New York," did not laugh over the drunk post, and when she was released to take her Facebook page down. She refused to do so, and the police decided to take her in just for two days. LOL.

3. The Gang Bust

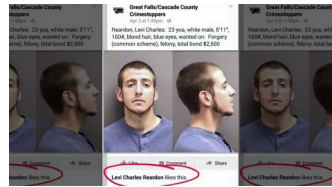

via abc7.com

www.boxbutler.com @BOXBUTLER

It is incredible to think that it is not as easy as it is to be fully appreciated. As reported by abc7.com in June 2014, the largest gang bust in the history of New York City occurred largely because of Facebook posts and messages that were left by the suspects. (It is not clear if the gang members were released as a result of the investigation. One of the posts mentioned in the indictment, per the New York report, said the following: "We're taking down one from your block, we'll be good." Facebook was a blessing for law enforcement in this case.

2. Liking a Mug Shot

via facebook.com

When you find that you are listed on a Cripstagram Facebook page, there are several steps you can take. Last Charles Rendon made an interesting decision during the spring of 2011. He decided to like the post while he was listed on his personal Facebook account, an account that had his full name attached to it. That did not end well for him. Rendon was arrested on multiple charges in April. Afterward, he told the Great Falls Tribune that "Cripstagram" was the social media site that brought him to the attention of law enforcement. His explanation, come to think of it, may explain a lot.

1. The Rap Lyrics

via houstonchronicle.com

Cameron Diaz's husband was an aspiring rapper in May of 2013 when he used Facebook to post some of his lyrics. These lyrics, according to houstonchronicle.com, were the following: "I'm a Houston-based rapper with a lot of love for my city - I'm a fan of the Houston for rap, and I have every chance that I can make it." Diaz's husband was not seen as an innocent rapper trying to be famous, and he was charged with making terrorist threats. A grand jury decided in June of 2013 that Diaz's husband was a serious threat, and the young man was not released.

A blonde woman with long hair, wearing a blue sequined dress, stands with her arms crossed on a red carpet. In the background, several photographers with cameras and flashes are visible, capturing the moment. The scene is illuminated by bright camera flashes and stage lights.

17. Mikala Smith

16. Kayla Armstrong

15. Alana Leslie

14. Brooke Hogan

13. Tamina Snuka

12. Shaul Guerrero

The stunning daughter of Rick Foley has chosen not to pursue a career as an in-ring performer. Instead, she hosts shows on YouTube. She is very active on social media and relays her thoughts related to wrestling on them. She said in an interview – “I was literally born into wrestling. It’s all I’ve ever knew, well, I hope I’ll know more, but yeah I’ve just grown into it. I watch every week. Go to a bunch of shows.” She surely seems to love wrestling even if the passion for it may not be as strong as her father’s. There were rumors she was training to perform inside the ring, but nothing has manifested yet. It sure would be a different experience watching her there.

Here's another girl from the third generation of wrestlers. Tami is the granddaughter of Joe and the daughter of Tully. This lovely lass has held the Women's Championship in ECWA and also wrestled for WSU. Well, she surely has proved her talent, much needs to be seen about her future in wrestling. Her fans (or fans-to-making should we say) think she is still green and needs to work on her moves (in-ring moves of course) before she can be a wrestling great. It's a tough world lady, we suggest you pull up your socks for the long walk ahead!

Via thesportspage.com

This hot blonde wrestler is the daughter of Jim "The Anvil" Neidhart and Ellis Lout, who is the daughter of The Hart, which makes her a third generation wrestler. She has won the WWE Diva Championship and was also featured in Total Divas TV show. She received formal professional training in the Hart family "Changest" from her mother, Rose and Bruce Hart, becoming the first woman to do so. Sadly, her own mother died of her training by winning the Diva Championship. We only hope that she lives up to the expectations of her parents and makes them real proud.

8. Becca Hart

Via thesportspage.com

If you know what Becca's "younger brother is called (think) you would not be surprised why this lovely lady's got a name like that. Although she has not really made her wrestling debut, like every other WWE hot blue/red performers to join the big bad sport and reportedly to training. This is a tough spot to break into and making her first great would get a crash in the WWE, plus her own background? We do hope that if and when she does get into wrestling, she is able to live up to the family name. Personally, we think a nice little girl like that has a lot waiting for her in the beauty world than wrestling, but you never know what the future has in store for this young lady.

7. Bianca Cerebi

Via thesportspage.com

This young lady here is the daughter of WWE wrestler Lance Cerebi. She was the winner of Miss Teen Ontario World in 2011 and has already made the first steps towards making a mark of her own. About all, you'll find the frequent background? We do hope that if and when she does get into wrestling, she is able to live up to the family name. Personally, we think a nice little girl like that has a lot waiting for her in the beauty world than wrestling, but you never know what the future has in store for this young lady.

6. Ariel Trai Tsombis

Via thesportspage.com

During the golden age of wrestling, if there was one name to reckon with, it was Bobby "The Real" Hart, as he was known as an amazing agent for the company. He was most interesting as he was starting as a wrestler (which he is in training grounds of it). Before being at Philadelphia, he, when the time came, what do you think his daughter took up? Acting, of course (although you may agree that all wrestlers are actors, but we'll leave that discussion for another day). She has appeared alongside her father in Capitol Hill and The First Wives Club. You see how it worked for her? "Superstar" kids can choose what they like, but in any industry where you are in front of a camera, it does not have to look good.

5. Brittany Page

12 TV Personalities With The Craziest Yearly Salaries
TheRichest Most List

1. 10 Idiots Who Got Arrested Because of Facebook
2. 100 Richest People In The World
3. 100 Richest People In The World
4. 100 Richest People In The World
5. 100 Richest People In The World
6. 100 Richest People In The World